Reconstituting Internet Normativity

The role of State, private actors, global online community in the production of legal norms
Frankfurter Studien zum Datenschutz

Veröffentlichungen der Forschungsstelle für Datenschutz an der Goethe-Universität, Frankfurt am Main

Herausgegeben von
Prof. Dr. Dr. h.c. Spiros Simitis
Prof. Dr. Indra Spiecker genannt Döhmann, LL.M.

Band 43
Dimitrios Koukiadis

Reconstituting Internet Normativity

The role of State, private actors, global online community in the production of legal norms
Inhaltsverzeichnis

List of Abbreviations 13

1. Introduction: Internet, a space inside or outside the “realm” of law?
   1.1 The idea of self-regulation of internet 17
   1.2 Three “generations” of internet legal scholarship 19
   1.3 Changing the architecture of cyberspace 35
   1.4 The Paradigm of Privacy 41
   1.5 What are the really crucial questions? 45

2. Globalization - Localization: Living Together 49
   2.1 A Globalised or a Localised approach to Internet? 49
   2.2 Sovereignty and the emergence of a “new” Civil Law 53
   2.3 Natural law vs. Legal Positivism 56
   2.4 The Public – Private approach and the regulation of cyberspace 60

3. The Different forms of Self – Regulation 62
   3.1 The “pure” Self-Regulation or the private Self-Regulation form. 62
   3.2 The Co-Regulation or the Regulated Self-Regulation form. 63
   3.3 The “Delegated” or the “Mandated” self-regulation form. 65
   3.4 The Case of Technical Standardization 66
   3.5 A critical approach to standardization and Self-Regulation Regimes. 69

4. The issue of legitimacy and accountability of non-state rule-making. 71
   4.1 Legitimacy and Accountability of Private Law-Makers 71
   4.2 The constitutional dimension of self-regulation’s legitimacy 73
4.2 The constitutionality of self-regulation and the “hard law” “soft law” debate 79
4.3.1 Protection of privacy and personal data 84
4.3.2 Freedom of Speech, Internet Jurisdiction and the efficiency of International Private Law 91

5. The Systems Theory Approach to Internet Regulation 100
5.1 Systems theory, the role of “complexity” and the need of “steering” 100
5.2 The Autopoietic theory approach and the responsive nature of Autopoietic Law 105
5.3 The private law-making process, privatization of justice and constitutionalisation without the State. 111
5.4 Is Legal Autopoiesis the right law-making regime for Internet Regulation? 119
5.4.1 The Principle of Representation 124
5.4.2 The Principle of Deliberation 125
5.4.3 The Principle of Separation of Powers. 127
5.4.4 The Limits of Freedom of Contract’s doctrine 132
5.4.5 Contractual Freedom and Third Parties 141
5.4.6 The Element of Paradox in Autopoietic Law 150
5.4.7 The Heterarchical Structure of the Autopoietic Legal Order 158

6. The Paradigms of “Lex Mercatoria” and “ICANN” 163
6.1 The Paradigm of “Lex Mercatoria” 163
6.1.1 The Evolution of Lex Mercatoria in the Middle Ages 164
6.1.2 The modern Law Merchant 168
6.1.3 Advantages of modern Law Merchant 173
6.1.4 From Lex Mercatoria to Lex Informatica 176
6.1.5 Advantages of Lex Informatica 181
6.1.5.1 Customization Advantages and contractual arrangements 182
6.1.5.2 Dispute Resolution and jurisdictional advantages 189
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6. Is lex mercatoria/lex informatica the suitable legal regime for cyberspace?</td>
<td>194</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6.1 A global legal system or a mere system of norms?</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6.2 The fragmented character of lex mercatoria/lex informatica</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6.3 The element of custom as a law-making medium</td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6.3.1 The definition of ‘custom’, ‘customary law’, ‘internet custom’</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6.3.2 Custom and its role as a source of law</td>
<td>202</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6.3.3 Can custom serve as a source of internet law?</td>
<td>206</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6.3.4 The notion of majority</td>
<td>210</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6.3.5 The element of legal relevance</td>
<td>211</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6.3.6 The conflict of customs</td>
<td>213</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6.4 Lex Mercatoria and the element of ‘economic efficiency’ as a base for ‘law-making’</td>
<td>216</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2 The Paradigm of ICANN</td>
<td>236</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.1 The Emergence of ICANN</td>
<td>236</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.2 The Structure and Function of ICANN</td>
<td>241</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.3 ICANN’s Domain Name Dispute Resolution Process</td>
<td>244</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.4 ICANN’s lex informatica as a successful embodiment of lex mercatoria</td>
<td>251</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.5 A critical approach to ICANN and its UDRP model</td>
<td>255</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.5.1 ICANN and the “forum shopping” method of dispute resolution</td>
<td>256</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.5.2 The issue of accountability</td>
<td>258</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.5.3 The issue of participation</td>
<td>260</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.5.4 The “heterarchical” and “decentralized” character of ICANN</td>
<td>263</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.5.5 The issue of legitimacy</td>
<td>264</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.5.6 ICANN and its “special” relationship with U.S. law</td>
<td>268</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Inhaltsverzeichnis
6.2.5.7 UDRP’s normative quality, legal uniformity, and legal certainty 273
6.2.5.8 The legal horizon of ICANN’s normative ordering 277
6.2.5.9 A critical assessment of ICANN’s paradigm as a normative order 279

7. The role of ‘State’ and ‘Government’, as major actors of internet regulation, re-examined 283

7.1 What may the ICANN paradigm teach us: freedom of contract or freedom from contract? 283
7.2 The role of “State” in reshaping internet’s normative standards 288
7.3 The potential models of internet regulation 295
7.3.1 The models proposed by WSIS and WIGG 295
7.3.2 A model based on co-regulation and “constitutionalism” 298
7.3.2.1 An international/transnational treaty-based regime as the source of co-regulation: the role of a “network” of states 302
7.3.2.2 The Structure and the Content of a Treaty-Based Legal Regime 309
7.3.2.2.1 The Structure of a treaty-based legal regime 309
7.3.2.2.2 The Content of a treaty-based legal regime 311
7.3.2.2.3 A “Network” of Judicial Law-Making 324
7.3.3 The Concept of Law-Making in the Internet Environment - Closing Arguments 329

Bibliography 353