

Fabian Wenner

Liberal Legitimacy

The justification of political power in the work of John Rawls

HART

Nomos

FUNDAMENTA JURIDICA

Beiträge zur rechtswissenschaftlichen
Grundlagenforschung

Volume 73

founded by

Jürgen Frank, Joachim Rückert,
Hans-Peter Schneider and Manfred Walther

edited by

Prof. Dr. Marietta Auer, Universität Gießen

Prof. Dr. Thomas Gutmann,
Westfälische Wilhelms-Universität Münster

Prof. Dr. Tatjana Hörnle, Humboldt Universität zu Berlin

Prof. Dr. Stephan Kirste, Universität Salzburg

Prof. Dr. Christoph Möllers, Humboldt Universität zu Berlin

Prof. Dr. Andreas Thier, Universität Zürich

Prof. Dr. Miloš Vec, Universität Wien

Fabian Wenner

Liberal Legitimacy

The justification of political power in the work
of John Rawls

HART

Nomos

The Deutsche Nationalbibliothek lists this publication in the Deutsche Nationalbibliografie; detailed bibliographic data are available on the Internet at <http://dnb.d-nb.de>

a.t.: Münster, Univ., Diss., 2019

ISBN: HB (Nomos) 978-3-8487-6867-7
ePDF (Nomos) 978-3-7489-0963-7

British Library Cataloguing-in-Publication Data

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

ISBN: HB (Hart) 978-1-5099-4600-6

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Wenner, Fabian

Liberal Legitimacy

The justification of political power in the work of John Rawls

Fabian Wenner

223 pp.

Includes bibliographic references.

ISBN 978-1-5099-4600-6 (hardcover Hart)

Onlineversion
Nomos eLibrary

1st Edition 2020

© Nomos Verlagsgesellschaft, Baden-Baden, Germany 2020. Printed and bound in Germany.

This work is subject to copyright. All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or any information storage or retrieval system, without prior permission in writing from the publishers. Under § 54 of the German Copyright Law where copies are made for other than private use a fee is payable to "Verwertungsgesellschaft Wort", Munich.

No responsibility for loss caused to any individual or organization acting on or refraining from action as a result of the material in this publication can be accepted by Nomos or the author.

Foreword

This work is the revised version of my dissertation, which was accepted by the Department of Education and Social Sciences of the Westfälische Wilhelms-Universität Münster in the spring of 2019. My special thanks go to the two supervisors of the dissertation, Prof. Dr. Ulrich Willems and Prof. Dr. Thomas Gutmann, who have always supported the work and have given me many valuable suggestions. I am also indebted to Prof. Dr. John Horton, whose great experience, combined with wit and friendliness, has been a great help to the work and me. During most of my doctoral studies I was a research associate at the Centre for Advanced Study in Bioethics, located at the University of Münster and funded by the German Research Council (DFG).

The Centre was an ideal context for the work on my dissertation, both from a professional and a collegial point of view, and I would like to thank my colleagues, Prof. Dr. Thomas Gutmann, Prof. Dr. Ulrich Willems, Stefan Klatt and Ruth Langer for the wonderful working conditions, the inspiration and the support I received there. I would also like to thank the DFG for generously financing the printing costs for this book.

Another fixture during the writing process was the Institute for Political Science at the University of Münster. I would like to thank the members of the doctoral colloquium at the Chair of Political Theory with a focus on politics and religion and the research group "Political Theory" at the Graduate School of Politics (GraSP) under the direction of Prof. Dr. Ulrich Willems for their careful reading and critical commentary on chapter drafts as well as numerous inspiring discussions. I also owe a debt of gratitude to the members of Prof. Dr. Reinold Schmücker's doctoral colloquium at the Philosophy Department of the University of Münster for helpful suggestions. Finally, I feel gratitude to the Aachen forest, whose trees and winded paths have given me some of the energy and ideas needed to finish the work (may it grow and blossom for many centuries to come).

I would like to thank Dr. Manon Westphal and Dr. Ulrike Spohn for great discussions and friendly cooperation during our joint dissertation period. I would also like to thank Dr. Birte Klemm, Luise Schüling, Dr. Oliver Hidalgo and Alexia Patterson for enriching discussions and helpful hints. Finally, my special thanks go to my parents, who have always accompanied and supported my path with kindness.

Table of Contents

Introduction	11
Thinking about legitimacy	11
The liberal perspective on legitimacy	12
The challenge of pluralism and public justification	13
Legitimacy as public justification in Rawls's work	15
The structure of the book	16
Part I - Liberal legitimacy in context	19
1. The concept of legitimacy	19
1.1 The elements of political power	19
1.1.1 The political system	20
1.1.2 The means of the political system	20
1.2 Concepts and conceptions of legitimacy	23
1.3 Empirical conceptions of legitimacy	24
1.3.1 Weber's belief-based conception of legitimacy	25
1.3.2 Beetham's hybrid conception of legitimacy	30
1.4 Normative (especially liberal) conceptions of legitimacy	33
1.4.1 Legitimacy and the resolution of political disagreements	35
1.4.2 Legitimacy, the justification of coercion, and obligation	39
1.4.3 The standards of legitimacy	44
1.5 Conclusion of the chapter	47
2. Liberal legitimacy and public justification	49
2.1 Two ideas of consent	50
2.2 Voluntarist accounts and their shortcomings	52
2.3 Hypothetical agreement and contractualism	56
2.3.1 The point of contractualist theories	58
2.3.2 The normative role of reasons in contractualist theories	61
2.3.3 The example of Kant's contractualism	63
2.4 Legitimacy as public justification	71
2.4.1 From philosophical to public justification	71
2.4.2 The challenge of legitimacy as public justification	74
2.5 Conclusion of the chapter	75

Table of Contents

Part II: Liberal legitimacy in a Rawlsian framework	77
3. Justice and legitimacy before the political turn	79
3.1 The nature of justification and reflective equilibrium	80
3.2 The contractualist argument for justice as fairness	83
3.2.1 The contractualist device of the original position	84
3.2.2 Two core ideas	86
3.2.2.1 Society as a system of fair cooperation	87
3.2.2.2 The two moral powers as the basis of freedom and equality	88
3.2.3 The original position as a device of representation	91
3.2.4 The argument from the original position	93
3.3 Democratic politics and legitimacy in Theory	99
3.3.1 The application of the principles of justice	100
3.3.2 Justice, legitimacy, and obligation	103
3.4 The stability of a well-ordered society as a justificatory condition	105
3.4.1 Stability for the right reasons	105
3.4.2 The normative role of stability in Theory	106
3.4.3 The idea of a well-ordered society	107
3.4.4 The argument for convergence on justice as fairness	110
3.5 Conclusion of the chapter	114
4. The challenge of reasonable disagreement	115
4.1 Reasonable disagreement and the burdens of judgment	115
4.2 Reasonable disagreement and the fundamentals of Theory	118
4.3 The problems with reasonable disagreement and pluralism	119
4.4 Conclusion of the chapter	121
5. Liberal legitimacy in Political Liberalism	122
5.1 The political conception of justice	124
5.1.1 The three features of a political conception	125
5.1.2 The content of public political culture and the process of justification	129
5.1.3 Reasonable conceptions of justice and generic liberalism	133
5.1.4 Excursus: the philosophical status of PL's argument	135
5.1.4.1 The role of PL's argument for a liberal conception of justice	137
5.1.4.2 The normative foundation of PL's argument for a liberal conception of justice	137

5.2	(Un)Reasonable citizens and the limits of public justification	140
5.2.1	The epistemic components of reasonableness	141
5.2.2	The ethical components of reasonableness	143
5.2.2.1	The idea of reasonable citizens	144
5.2.2.2	Impermissible conceptions of the good and comprehensive doctrines	147
5.2.3	Unreasonable citizens and public justification	149
5.2.4	The rights of unreasonable citizens	152
5.2.5	Vagueness and the limits of reasonable disagreement	153
5.3	The role of overlapping consensus	155
5.3.1	The idea of overlapping consensus	157
5.3.2	The road to an overlapping consensus	158
5.3.3	Reasonable comprehensive doctrines and overlapping consensus	162
5.3.4	Legitimacy and overlapping consensus	168
5.4	Public reason and the legitimate exercise of political power	172
5.4.1	The constitutional framework and legitimacy	173
5.4.2	Public reason as a precondition for the legitimate exercise of political power	175
5.4.2.1	The idea of public reason	176
5.4.2.2	Range of application	178
5.4.3	Neuralgic points of public reason and political liberalism	181
5.4.3.1	Public reason as a normative notion (not primarily epistemic)	181
5.4.3.2	Public reason and dependence on comprehensive doctrines	183
5.4.3.3	The historical contingency of public reason	187
5.4.3.4	The indeterminacy of public reason	190
5.4.3.5	Public reason, neutrality, and public justification	191
5.4.3.6	Political liberalism and unrealistic views of the political	197
5.5	Conclusion of the chapter	200
6.	Beyond legitimacy as public justification	201
6.1	The duties of citizens who reject political liberalism	201
6.2	The normative authority of partially illegitimate legislation	203
6.3	The political and philosophical status of political liberalism	204
6.4	Conclusion of the chapter	207

Table of Contents

Conclusion	208
Bibliography	213