16 Learning Process and Interaction	181
a) Rhythmised learning within the fields	181
b) Resonance in the aesthetic learning space	182
c) Resonance and inspiration	184
d) Interaction patterns in the learning process	185
17 Planning Between Structure and Dynamics	187
a) Lesson structure: beginning – development – end	187
b) Preparatory grid	190
c) Planning a long-term process	192
18 Reflection and interaction	197
a) Lively preparation and reflection	197
b) Reflections	197
c) Assessment	200
d) Evaluations	202
e) Observation of individual pupils using the model	202
19 Perception distinction in difficult pedagogical situations	205
a) Children learn (about) music with all their senses	205
b) Impact of a lack of differentiation	205
c) Structural changes in the classroom	206
d) Observing, analysing and changing difficult teaching situations	211

Content

20 Heterogeneity is music	215
a) The chance of music in diversity	215
b) Musical learning is a complex process	216
c) The inclusive music lessons are designed to be perceptible and tangible	217
d) Clear pulse and rhythm movements support musical learning	218
e) Composing the 'aesthetic' in a visual and auditive manner is part of the success	219
f) The score of the inclusive music lesson has different parts	220
21 Beyond the model	223
a) Between the poles of art and pedagogy	224
b) The model and acquisition of competencies	225
c) Music – movement – learning	227
d) The model as the basis for a specific concept development	228
e) Experimental spaces	230
f) The relationship of creativity and learning	232
g) Relationship and handiwork	233
h) Innovative learning	233
Appendix: Information on literature and references	235
